THE Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest baking powder made. It has received the highest award at the U. S. Gov't official investigation, and at all the Great International Expositions and World's Fairs wherever exhibited in competition with others.

It makes the finest, lightest, sweetest, most wholesome bread, cake and pastry. More economical than any other leavening agent.

IN CLOSE QUARTERS.

Narrow Escape of Mrs. Judge Lewis.

Mr. Caddie Lewis, wife of Judge Joseph H. Lewis of the Court of Appeals, had a narrow escape from burning to death one evening during the recent cold snap. She went to her flower pit at her home on the corner of Second and Conway streets to look after the heating apparatus, and not wishing to let the cold air into the pit opened the outside door, stepped into the narrow space between it and the inside door, closing the former behind her, and in order to see how to open the inner door struck a match which set fire to the nap on a cotton cotton wrapper in which she was dressed. The dress flashed up like so much powder and being afraid to open the door for fear the air would only feed the flame she screamed for help. Judge Lewis heard her cries and ran to her assistance, but before reaching her she had gathered up her dress and smothered the flames with her hands. Having on rubber gloves she escaped further injury than a severe nervous shock from the fright.

Mammoth Hooters.

Two of the largest owls we have ever seen were on exhibition at Mr. H. R. Williams' grocery on Tuesday. One was wounded and captured by a son of Mr. Church Vaughn, on the Clark place near this city, and placed in a coop. That night its mate came and kept so much fuss that the family could scarcely sleep for it, and the next night it was captured also in a trap placed on top of the coop. They were about the size of an ordinary turkey.

In Rags but Had Money.

A white woman, traveling through the country, applied for lodging at the poor house at Bridgeport Tuesday night, which request was granted, but she was required under the rules of the institution to take a bath and change her clothing. When her old dress was taken from her she began to weep bitterly and when asked what was the trouble said she wanted her dress, and upon investigation it was found she had about two hundred dollars concealed in it and, as it turned out afterwards, had something like five hundred dollars with her. She was brought to this city the next morning by Sheriff Armstrong and an effort made to send her to her home.

A Firm of Architects.

Mr. Leo Oberwarth, the architect who located in this city last year, has now associated with him Mr. W. J. Wade and the firm of Oberwarth & Wade have opened an office in the second story of the Duval building, 131½ St. Clair street, where they will be glad to have those who propose to erect new buildings or make improvements on old ones, and wish plans and specifications made, to call and see them. Several buildings were erected last year from Mr. Oberwarth's plans which show his skill as an architect.

Death of Mrs. Pryor.

Mrs. Aphia Pryor, wife of Chief Justice Pryor of the Court of Appeals, died suddenly at her home in New Castle on Wednesday evening, the result of a stroke of paralysis. Judge Pryor has the sympathy of every one who knows the grand old gentleman in his deep affliction.

Divorce Granted.

Mrs. Ann Mary Gay was granted a divorce from her husband, Hugh Gay, by the Circuit Court a few days since.

Blood Will Tell.

According to the condition of it, if in bad order it shows itself in pimples, sallow complexion and various eruptions of the skin. If in good order it shows in the clear complexion, the glow of health, the good spirits. The latter condition you can produce by the use of Dr. Hale's Household Tea, the great blood purifier and nerve tonic. 25c. and 50c. a package at F. H. CARPENTER'S drug store.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

The regular meeting of the Council was held Tuesday evening at the City Hall.

The Clerk stated that he had presented the bill for the 2 per cent. gross earnings of the Street Railway Company of this city, and had been informed by the Treasurer that he had no money with which to pay. Suit was ordered brought against the company for the amount.

On motion of Mr. Miles, the question of requiring the railroad company to give a new bond was referred to the finance committee. Ordinances prohibiting fast driving on the St. Clair street bridge, creating a Fire Department and requiring property holders on the east side of Conway street, between Third and Cross streets, to put down sidewalks, were given their final passage.

A special committee, composed of councilmen Fortune, Tobin and Haly, was appointed to investigate the question of lighting the whole city with electricity.

Mayor Julian was authorized to offer a reward of $100 for the person who set fire to the house at the corner of Ann and Mero streets a few nights since.

The council then adjourned.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

The Landing Success of This Generation.

"In Old Kentucky" made a tremendous hit in New York and elsewhere last season and bids fair to outstrip all other American plays in enduring popularity. It exploited a new field in the romance and excitement of the Blue Grass State and it received instant recognition because it introduces playgoers to a phase of life right here in our own country quite as interesting as that shown with such monotonous repetition by foreign authors. It breathes a purer atmosphere than the immoral French drama and it is immeasurably superior to the turgid rubbish English authors have foisted upon us for years. It is a model of its kind. Not lacking in dainty and idyllic touches, it also has the pungent flavor of old Bourbon in every line. Aside from its merit as a drama of contemporaneous life, it is a picturesque and imposing scenic production. It should not, however, be confounded with plays which depend wholly for success upon elaborate scenery, or one or two sensational incidents. It is full of excitement and go, and having made a big hit, it will—of course—have countless imitators. The imitations may have pickaninny bands and horse races and the other special features of this play, but imitations are usually failures. "In Old Kentucky's" popularity is based upon a more solid foundation.

At the Opera House Thursday, Jan. 31st.

"The Fencing Master,"

By DeKoven & Smith, the brightest, best and most successful of all later day comic operas, will be presented at the Opera House on Tuesday evening next, Jan. 29, by the famous Whitney Opera Company of fifty odd artists.

This organization is the largest, best equipped and most perfectly appointed of all companies presenting comic opera on the road this season.

Everything appertaining to the performance is carried intact. The scenery is complete, the costumes are new and superlatively handsome, while even the smallest property or stage effect is reproduced precisely as in "The Fencing Master's" metropolitan engagement.

There is good reason for the popularity of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Davis & Buzard, of West Monterey, Clarion Co. Pa., says: "It has cured people that our physicians could do nothing for. We persuaded them to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and they now recommend it with the rest of us." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by PHIL CARPENTER, South Side Druggist.

PEORIA GLUTEN FEED.

FRANKFORT, January 17, 1895.
I did handle and feed thirty-three (33) cows; it took all of them to supply milk for my customers. PEORIA GLUTEN FEED was recommended to me as superior to any other and I gave it a careful and personal test. I can state that I have been able to dispose of eight (8) of my cows and am now milking only twenty-five (25), which yield more milk than the thirty-three did before using this feed.

Thieves of Time.

The cases of the negroes who broke into W. J. Scott's grocery and stole a lot of watches were taken up in the Circuit Court on Wednesday when Howard Burbridge, one of the number, plead guilty to having received stolen goods and was given sixty days in the workhouse; George Johnson and Joe Branham were found guilty by juries of having received stolen goods and the former given sixty and the latter thirty days in the workhouse; in the case of Ovid Wilson the jury gave him one year in the pen. Hamilton Hathaway plead guilty to breaking into the store, turned States evidence, told on all the balance and also received a sentence of one year in the penitentiary. Chas. Morton, the last one of the gang, was given sixty days in the workhouse.

George Graves was sent to the penitentiary for one year for breaking into Brady's shop.

The case of Bud Page for breaking into the grocery of Mr. M. T. Mitchell and stealing a watch was continued until the next term.

An Old Time Comb.

Mr. R. E. Hawkins found, a few days ago at his home on the Old Tommie Middleton place in this county, a silver fine-tooth comb, and has failed to find anyone old enough to remember when silver combs of this kind were in use. This one was made by L. C. Ives & Co., of New York, February 24, 1815. It lacks only a few weeks of being eighty years old and the teeth show signs of hard service.

Trotters for the Sale.

HERE.

Gone from the bloom and the gladness,
Gone from the light and the cheer,
Gone from the love that was closest,
Gone from the life that was dear,
On rule the world with its slings—
In with its work, and its pride;
But I'll not meet again with my darling
In all the world, empty and wide.

Under the sod they have laid her,
Hallowed a chamber of rest,
Nest in my arms I'll find her,
Or be closest to her dear loving breast.
Still are the feet that move'd ever
In circles of mercy and grace;
Down in the gloom and the sadness
Hidden in death's loved face.

Gone, and the home is so dreary;
Gone and my heart is so true;
Gone from the path that she brightened,
Gone with a faint smile and a tear;
How shall I face on without her—
How reach the end of the day?
Shadows and darkness have gathered
Thick o'er my desolate way.

H. SANFORD.

OVER THERE.

Entered the Mansions of glory,
Safe in the bosom of God,
Waiting the highway of Heaven,
Free where the ransomed have trod;
Free from the blight of sorrow,
Pure from the staining of sin,
While after great tribulation,
Glad the Fair City within.

Established there with the Saviour,
Past all the old and the new,
Never again to be broken,
Never in heartache to rue;
Young with a business immortal,
Glad with a future untold,
Strong with a life never ending,
They are home in the City of gold.

Soul, in thy glorious raiment,
Friend, in thy radiant of joy,
Fruitful and blessed Franking
Now all thy power employ.
How I yearn for the day
When forth from the gloom and darkness
I, too, shall be glorified.

It is the only train for Jersey City Coast resorts, which are reached by the F. F. V. at dinner time instead of in the evening. It is the only train that enables business men to transact business in Cincinnati one day and reach Washington for breakfast the next morning. It is the most desirable train for New England resorts, connections being made in the Union Depot in Washington with the Colonial Express running through to Boston which reaches New Haven 4:10 p. m., New London 5:30 p. m., Providence 7:15 p. m., and Boston 8:30 p. m. Deaths.

CURRENT—Rev. J. N. Current and wife lost their sweet little daughter Fannie May Current, Wednesday. The little girl had been sick with pneumonia, and suffered a relapse. An abscess formed on her lung from which she was unable to rally. The parents are almost heart broken over their severe loss, and the sympathy of their many friends is tendered them in their sad bereavement. Fannie May was in her 10th year and was a beautiful and interesting child and was loved by everybody. The funeral took place yesterday morning from the residence of the bereaved parents, Rev. Wm. Smith conducting the religious services, after which the interment took place in the Odd Fellows cemetery.—Warsaw Independent, Jan. 10th.

The deceased was the granddaughter of the late Thomas Farmer, of this county, and the affected parents have the sympathy of a large circle of friends and relatives here.

MURRAY—Judge John Allen Murray died at his home in Cloverport, Breckinridge county, on Monday night. The deceased was a half brother of the late John Allen Crittenden and an uncle of Miss Rose Crittenden, of this city.

MURRAY—Miss Rosa Murray, daughter of Mr. Logan C. Murray, died at the home of her parents in Louisville on Thursday. She was a cousin of Mrs. M. C. Haycraft and Miss Rose Crittenden, of this city.

WHITTINGTON—Mrs. Elizabeth Whittington, formerly of this county, died at her home in Jeffersonville, Indiana, on Friday evening, January 18th, 1895, at 5 o'clock of heart disease, aged 78 years. She was the widow of the late Humphrey Whittington and had been a consistent and faithful member of the Christian Church for more than fifty years. She was a native of Virginia, and could always interest the young, and old as well with the story of her travels. Aunt Lizzie, as she was best known, was beloved by all who knew her, and filled the homes of all her friends with sunshine. We will all miss her dear face. She had never rallied from the shock caused by the death of her son Alonzo, who was killed by a train scarcely two years ago. She has gone to join the loved ones in a brighter home above.

PIONEER LIFE IN THE WEST.

George E. Frazer—His Remarkable Trip Across the Plains—The Willamette Valley—The Doniphan Party.

BY S. R. S.

CHAPTER I.

On one of the many hills that give to Frankfort, Ky., a picturesque and scenic beauty that charms every visitor, resides Geo. E. Frazer—one of the earliest of pioneers who ventured to explore the then great unsettled region lying west of the Platte and Missouri rivers. Tall and lank of form, his eye is yet bright and flashing, his step vigorous, his mind clear as a bell, and not an un-sound tooth interferes with the province of digestion. To him the thrilling adventures of his early life along the Oregon frontier, when the crack of the rifle and the wild war-whoop of the Indian rang often along the forest aisles of broke the stillness of the night, seem now a dream of dim and distant things.

Nothing delights him better than to talk of the scenes and events of those early days in the west, and so clear is his recollection of every detail that to write them all would fill a good-sized book. In his recitals there is a modest absence of self, and whilst recounting occurrences bristling with dangers and full of death, his own part in the drama is lost in his delineation of the valiant deeds of others.

In the Presidential election of 1844, he was an ardent Whig and devoted champion of Mr. Clay. So enthused did he become that he wagered all he possessed on Clay's election, vowing that if Clay was beaten he would leave the country. When the event transpired, true to his word, he left Woodford county, Ky., in the spring of '45 and went to Platte county, Mo. In April following he went to Independence, Mo., and with three other "bachelors" from Boston, Mass., they formed an outfit to cross the plains and reach Oregon. Buying a wagon, three yoke of cattle and provisions—the latter including 50 pounds of bacon and 100 pounds of flour per man—they went ten miles out and made camp on the open prairie. Considerable numbers of emigrants were then outfitting and combining to cross the plains, and with a company of these they united. U. S. troops from Fort Leavenworth regularly inspected the caravans and those not having 6 months provisions were turned back.

The company formed, consisting of about 200 wagons, was piloted by Steve Meek, an old mountaineer, who had been in the Rockies with Sublette and others. A man named Welsh was elected Captain and subordinate officers chosen. The train started about the first of May, carrying with them a drove of three or four hundred loose cattle or cows. Every night a strong picket was put out for fear of Indians. Traveling several weeks they finally reached the North Platte river. Progress had been laborious and slow, the wagons often having to be let down precipices with ropes. Becoming dissatisfied at the slow travel, a band of about thirty "bachelors" or single men, with ten wagons, forged ahead and never saw the main company afterwards. Nearing the Platte, buffalo swarmed in thousands and tens of thousands. The bulls were on one side of the Platte and the cows and calves on the other.

At the Platte three men joined the small party—two Choto brothers and a negro trapper—the latter had trapped with Sublette. This party hunted buffalo and buffalo calves. Their method of hunting was to approach a herd to windward that was lying down and shoot several before the alarm was taken. Those shot would get up, stamp their feet, then lie down and die. As the herd took flight the Choto brothers would follow on horseback, using their pistols and killing all they could, often securing 10 or 15 in a day. They would only take the fleece from the fore-shoulder, leaving the balance to be consumed by coyotes and wolves. Often the gay wolves would hamstring a buffalo, and have a feast, while the coyotes sat patiently around waiting their turn for the remnants.

One day the train laid by and jerked buffalo meat by drying on a scaffold in the sun and air, without salt. Crossing the Sweetwater they traveled up its bank till the forks of the trail was reached—one road going to Fort Bridger and the other known as "Sublette's cut-off." The latter, a very rough trail, was taken. Beaver were plentiful—willow trees being cut all along the streams. At Green River Indian sign became abundant and caused much alarm. The Kansas, Pawnee, Sioux, Blackfeet and Snake Indians, whose country was traversed in the order named, often came in to fight. The presence of hostiles was evidenced in stock being occasionally stolen.

Reaching Bear Creek, it was followed to Soda Springs where the main trail forked—one road going to Oregon and the other to California. The Oregon road was taken. From the large beds of potash about Soda Springs a quantity was gathered to make bread. In succession, Fort Hall—a trading post for furs—and Snake river or Lewis Fork were left behind with outlying inhabitants of Spokane and Digger Indians, a low-graded tribe. From Snake to Malahua river stretched a desert, inhabited only by sage hens, horned frogs, jack rabbits and antelope. For 25 or 30 miles was neither water nor camping place.

At Burnt river the provision supply was nearly exhausted, and Frazer, Baptist Gaudippe and two others named Staats and English, volunteered to go on 150 to 200 miles to a missionary station called the Dals, on Columbia river, this side the Cascade mountains, for assistance. This was now the middle of September, the party having been out 5½ months. On the fifth day, after traversing the Umatilla Valley, the Dals was reached. Its occupants, two Methodist Missionaries, named Waller and Brewer, with their wives, were astonished to see the new-comers and hear of their long journey. Dinner was about ready, a clean white table cloth on the table, and butter, milk and vegetables—giving a new aching to the pangs of hunger that tormented the three men who had long been living on gruel. Frazer, hinting his hunger, was invited to the table, whilst the other two, who had gone down below the house to the spring, were not asked to appease their hungry cravings, though Frazer told of their sufferings and weak condition.

After picketing their horses, English and Staats got a blue squash out of the garden, roasted and ate it. For this act, they were sharply censured by the "good missionaries," but finding the hungry men in no amiable mood Brewer and Waller ceased their brutal complaint. No food could be obtained for the emigrants on the march, though a large herd of fat cattle were grazing near the station, owned by the missionaries. The most they would do was to let Frazer have a peck of wheat for himself and companions.

While at the station waiting for the company to arrive, Frazer and Gaudippe attempted to find a wagon road over the Cascade mountains, but after being half a day out, Gaudippe suggested that the mountains were full of Indians and likely to kill Frazer if met with, that he had best return; as for himself, being an old trapper and half bred they were not likely to molest him. Frazer thereupon returned. Gaudippe was never heard of afterwards. Whether killed by Indians or drifting to other regions beyond the knowledge of his late comrades, he disappeared as if shut out by an endless night.

The emigrant train arrived in a few days, and the "poor merciful" missionaries kindly opened their hearts by trading at big odds some of their fat Spanish cattle for the lean American stock brought by the emigrants over the plains. The latter were very valuable for breeding purposes—worth four or five to one of the Spanish variety. Rafts were now made for floating the wagons down the Columbia to the Cascade falls. The emigrants went by land whilst the cattle were driven across the mountains. When the falls were reached, a portage was made and travel resumed to that part of the Willamette Valley where Portland now stands. There were no settlements—only a few huts of half breeds, old traders of the Hudson Bay Company, on French Prairie, on south side Willamette river. There were also some early adventurers such as Bill Doty, Billy Wilkerson, a man named Meek, Walker, from Jessamine Co., Ky., and Black Hawk, who had gone over with Fremont the year before. All had Indian wives.

The Willamette Valley stretches from mouth of Willamette river to Kallaponya Mountains, a distance of 100 to 125 miles, and from 10 to 15 miles in width. It consisted of fertile prairie, with heavy fir growth along the smaller streams. There were a few houses and a mill at Oregon City, owned by Dr. McLaughlin, President of the Hudson Bay Co.

Frazer staked a claim in Yam Hill county, on river of same name, and passed the winter following, subsisting on ducks, geese, deer, with bear and elk from Coast Range; for bread, he had boiled wheat. It was a fine wheat country. In the spring of '46 he cultivated his land, sowing wheat with peas, broadcast, from which he realized good crops.

About this time a party of emigrants, called the Doniphan or Doniphan party, went from Soda Springs on the California route. Arriving at foot of Sierra Nevada mountains, their provisions gave out, and after eating their cattle were reduced to such extremity they began to eat each other—eating the children first. A sucking child died and its body was divided among the starving men and women. Others were killed and the flesh divided and eaten. In this appalling state of affairs, Doniphan, who led the party, got some snow shoes and started over the mountains for relief. He had not gone far before he found a bear in a log, killed it and getting assistance carried it to camp as a sweet morsel for the famishing. Starting again, he reached the summit of the range and saw two Indians some distance away. Making friendly signs they came to him. Not understanding their language, he wrote a note and by signs made them understand it was to be taken to Sutter's Fort, some fifty miles away. They executed this mission faithfully—Sutter, on receiving the note, at once sent a relief party of whites and Indians, on snow shoes, to the rescue of the emigrants. The latter then undertook the perilous trip over the mountains and safely reached the Fort—the women staiding the hardships much better than the men. Near Sutter's Fort, Sacramento City, then barren of settlement, has since grown up. Some years afterwards, in 1848, one of the Doniphan party was boasting of the sweetness of human flesh as eaten in their extremity, when the bystanders were so enraged that he came near being lynched.

The readers of the ROUNDABOUT will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for full list of testimonials.
